

First test is about the game Apex legends, and the result is about 0.1 sentiment score.

A screenshot of a terminal window titled "Terminal" with a menu bar (File, Edit, View, Search, Terminal, Help). The terminal displays several lines of text, which are tweets related to the game Apex Legends. The tweets are from users like BlazedRTs, Ahkamay, thekam2005, DanyPhantomSRE, Slimster_09, and An00bisS2R. The tweets mention streaming on Twitch, game updates, and player experiences. At the bottom of the terminal, there is a summary of the analysis: "The name of the game is: Apexlegends", "The average sentiment score is: 0.1040000019967556", "The average sentiment magnitude is: 0.5150000009685755", and "The feedback of the game Apexlegends is about average". The terminal prompt is "shuhaohu ~ /testing %". The time "0:07:02" is displayed in the bottom right corner.

Next, I noticed there is a newly released game, battlefield 2042, it is currently on beta test, so I entered the keywords Battlefield2042, the feedback is 0.06 sentiment score.

It has the lowest score among three games, so I decided to read about some posts content to find out why.

First, someone mentioned that the game AI is out of control, so I guess it will pull down the score.

Elon Musk warned us about?

Then more people are frustrated by this game, so I think that's another reason why the score is lower.

ceenade : I know it's a Beta and while I did have some fun, I can't help but to feel disappointed. #Battlefield2042 😞

Even though there is some positive feedback like this one below, grashiebear : @Hunter4J Disagree. My favorite by far is battlefield2042, with halo in second place (yet still very excited for too)

But I think more of them are negative feedbacks, thus it explained why the outcome average score for battlefield 2042 is the lowest.
